

Summer Assignment- AP Psych Intro Letter

Using any source, rewrite this letter and replace the bolded terms with its definition within the context of the sentence. Put each bolded term in parenthesis after each definition/application. Errors will result in a deduction of points. This must be typed.

Dear (your name here),

You must be intrinsically motivated to be in the class for there are few extrinsic motivators. Hopefully you'll get in the flow even before the class begins. I'm certain that all of you did not miss the critical period, therefore you should be able to use both fluid intelligence and crystalized intelligence to find answers. Additionally, you will be using your Broca's area and Wernicke's area to communicate with everyone in our class while using correct grammar, proper syntax, morphemes, and phonemes.

There will be all sorts of transduction and parallel processing happening in our brains as we journey into the world of Psychology. Our hippocampus will be very busy as we encode and find memory storage for information. You'll be asked for the retrieval of semantic memory for exams without the use of artificial intelligence or other assistance. Instead, you can use mnemonics, chunking, imagery, and acronyms.

Even though your hormones may be raging, hopefully no one in our class will be suffering from narcolepsy, sleep apnea, insomnia, or split brain, as that will make learning very difficult to say the least.

I can guarantee that this class will test your ideas of what is and what isn't a norm. I can also guarantee that this class will at times upset you, forcing you into critical thinking, self-disclosure, and into belief perseverance.

At the same time, this class will enlighten you about those of us who may have psychological disorders and help to remove our fixation (non-Freudian definition here please), functional fixedness, prejudices, and stereotypes. But fear not, even though we enter the world of the abnormal, we head right into therapy to help us solve some problems and may inspire us to be more altruistic.

Your creativity will be valued in this class. Your attitude and motivation is critical for success. Social loafing, slacking, procrastinating, copying or cheating are never good ideas. Working together to pass the AP Exam is one of our superordinate goals.

So, have a wonderful summer. Keep your neural networks going and be certain to protect your brainstem, limbic system, and cerebral cortex as our brains have only so much plasticity.

Sincerely,

Mr. Gray
